Ms. Virginia Masters

Hello. I am going to tell you why my mom deserves to win the parent of the year award. My first reason is that my mom is the most loving person anyone could ever meet. My mom always has time for me and my brother. She will try to get as much free time she can get to spend time with us. When I get out of school she will always ask me how my day was. If I say bad she'll try to cheer me up. My mom cares about my feelings too. Another reason is she is very helpful. Anytime you have a problem she's the woman to call! She can help you with homework, when you get sick, if you get an injury, or if you're simply just sad about something.

My second reason is my mom is a very hard working woman. My mom has a very hard job to handle. She is a Spanish teacher in the middle school. My mom teaches two entire grades! And not all of her students listen and get good grades. But when she comes home you always see a smile on her face.

Also, she does so many things around the house. Like I said before she has a hard job. Well she still has energy everyday to cook dinner (except she sometimes has help) after that clean the house, wash dishes, do the laundry and even walk the dog! She will do so many things that it amazes me. Aside from her job, and duties she needs to do she has two wonderful children. Except those two wonderful children ask me and my brother, they fight alot. My brother and I usually don't get along that often. So everyday she has to listen to yelling, so she goes to us, finds out what the problem is and fixes it!

My third and final reason is that she always has time for family. She finds time for me and supports me in everything I do. I feel she is doing the best she can, and in this case best is enough. And those are all of the reasons why I think my mom should win "The Parent of the Year Award"
