Fathers are kids best, best, best, pals, they love each other, and help each other out in nearly every way. Fathers in a way are the... best! But I think (and vote) that my dad is the greatest of all. He's definitely the most caring father of all. Being so caring of me and the family he loves, makes him joyful and proud as can be. And finally, he can be described as a dad that only the best family could have. These are the exact traits that describe him.

I'll start with a reason why he's caring. First of all, my dad gives a meaning of caring by showing that he is always there for me, when I am having a concert, or when it's my birthday. He is also there for the bad times, such as if I was sick or injured. But he can be really caring when he is there to help me with the big and hard things in life. All of these reasons lead up to one trait that my dad is a caring father.

Being a caring father means being a joyful and proud father. My dad is so joyful, he is happy to see me when I come from school always.

He can also be proud sometimes when I do something great, amazing, or good. A sign that makes him really joyful is that he is always making me laugh. I can surely tell you that being joyful and proud are good traits for a dad.

For my final reason I say that my dad is so good as a father that only the best of a family could have. In our family he makes us all look great and makes our family shine! He also just does not make me laugh, he makes everyone happier by telling them jokes. Really, in conclusion he... is... the... best-dad-ever!

And I mean it, dads can be the star of the children's life. My dad is the star of my life. And I believe he can be the star of all dads!
